

Massive Revival Moment as 10,000 Seek Jesus at University of Arkansas

In the fourth major collegiate revival in less than a month, thousands of students gathered at the University of Arkansas on Thursday night, Sept. 19, to seek Jesus Christ and find salvation in His name.

Unite US reports that 10,000 students from 67 different universities gathered in Bud Walton Arena.

"Jesus met us there," the ministry said in an Instagram post. "We were blown away by His presence in the room and how it carried over to baptisms. It was a night we'll never forget."

One young man shared his powerful testimony right before getting baptized at the event, saying, "I spent a lot of years running from God. I just came to Jesus about five weeks ago, but I got caught up in, I'll just say it, cocaine and alcohol. I had a lot of really near-death experiences and I think Jesus had His hand on my life because I should not be here."

Evangelist Tanya Pruett reports that, so far, over 2,000 salvations and over 800 baptisms have taken place through the Unite US campus events over the past year.

"I believe this is the generation that will usher in the greatest move of God we've ever seen, and we're seeing that," Pruett said during a recent podcast. "And I do believe what we had in the fall and the spring of this past year is just the beginning. Greater things are coming, and I feel for the end of this year and leading into 2025, something greater is coming. God is doing something across this nation... I do believe this move of God on college campuses is ushering in a greater awakening."
