

Meet the New Christian College That Plans to Completely Revolutionize Higher Education

A well-known Boston businessman is planning to open a new four-year college in the east coast city that will focus on conservative Christian values.

Investment fund manager Finny Kuruvilla has said that he plans to fund Sattler College with $30 million of his own money. The Harvard-educated Kuruvilla will utilize online learning platforms and is set to offer enrolment at a fee of $9,000—a fraction of the money that many private colleges are now charging their cash-strapped students.

Click here to read the rest of this story from our content partners at Faithwire.