Mark Driscoll: Is Donald Trump a Christian?

In a recently posted video, Pastor Mark Driscoll addresses a question on the minds of many Christians: Is Donald Trump truly a Christian?

Driscoll shares his thoughts on Trump's faith, offering insights from his recent experience at the National Faith Advisory Board event. In the video, Driscoll also encourages Christians to prioritize policy over personality in the upcoming election, emphasizing the importance of aligning voting decisions with biblical values.

"It was largely pastors and ministry leaders," Driscoll says, recounting a schedule filled with "a lot of worship and a lot of prayer” at the event. He and his wife, Grace, believe it may have been “the last pastor’s Faith event before the election.” According to Driscoll, the timing adds weight to the day, as many leaders anticipate the upcoming election and discuss issues they see as vital to their communities.

Trump Plans Faith Office Revival if Elected

Former President Donald Trump declared during Monday’s National Faith Summit in Powder Springs, Georgia, that he would reinstate the Faith Office he established during his first term as president.

Paula White-Cain, founder of the National Faith Advisory Board, asked Trump, “What happens in the second term, a faith office, what’s your administration look like?”

“First of all, we’re going to set that up, and we’ll be talking to you and all of the people that we just met, and anybody else that you think is appropriate well,” Trump said. “It’s important, and it’ll be directly into the Oval Office.”
