

Morning Rundown: Pastors Take Charge Combatting 'Drag Queen Story Hour'

Here's a quick summary of the top stories on :

Pastors Take Charge Combatting 'Drag Queen Story Hour'

In a challenge to Christian men across the world, two pastors have taken up the mantle of leadership and started preaching the gospel in their local libraries.

Pastors Dale Partridge of Prescott, Arizona, and Michael Foster of Batavia, Ohio, decided there had been enough talk and complaining about men in drag reading to children, and that it was time to act.

To counteract the extreme sexualization of children through performances that are usually reserved for strip clubs, the two men started a "Pastor Story Hour" at their local libraries. Sadly, it was in local, taxpayer-funded libraries that children were first subjected to these events.

Look Closer at Dwayne 'The Rock' Johnson's Guilt Over Past Sins

Megastar Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson has been candid about his faith in God over the years. He gives God the credit for giving him the strength to endure the hard times in his life, before reaching superstardom as a wrestler-turned-movie star.

Johnson recently posted on Instagram about growing up in Hawaii, and how his family was "broke" while living there. He admitted that he would steal a Snickers bar from 7-11 every day as a snack.

These minor acts of thievery left a lasting impression on

Johnson's heart, however, as he would remember committing the crimes every time he would drive by a 7-11.

Republicans Insist on Trump Apology for Hosting Kanye West, Known Antisemite for Dinner

There's growing backlash against former President Donald Trump over his dinner with an anti-Semitic activist.

The former president is facing criticism for meeting with Nick Fuentes, an outspoken white nationalist and anti-Semite.

Trump blames the rapper formerly known as Kanye West, for bringing Fuentes to the dinner and claims he did not know who he was. He released a series of statements Friday trying to explain the circumstances of the meeting. {eo}

Bring Charisma magazine home with a subscription today!