

Morning Rundown: Were the Trump Prophets Right After All?

Here's a quick rundown of the top stories on :

Were the Trump Prophets Right After All?

It was all the rage back in 2020. A chorus of prophetic leaders announced with certainty that Donald Trump would be reelected and serve a second term in the White House, but he did not—at least, not in 2020. Now that he has been reelected, resoundingly at that, does this mean that these prophets were right after all? Certainly not.

First, some of the “prophets” (I will let God decide their actual status and calling) said that Trump would serve eight consecutive years. They were dogmatic and clear and aggressive, even after the 2020 election results were announced. “Watch and see” they proclaimed, but nothing happened.

Second, after Biden's victory was announced, the prophets predicting his reelection doubled down. Many said that he did win the election, but it was stolen.

Amanda Grace: Tucker Carlson Prophecy Fulfilled

Did a prophetic dream about Tucker Carlson come to pass?

A year-and-a-half ago, Amanda Grace had a dream about Tucker Carlson, sharing the details about it five days prior to Carlson's firing from Fox News to Charisma's Stephen Strang during her podcast. The two prayed for Carlson, unknowingly interceding during what would be a divine moment for him. Later, in February of this year, Grace saw in greater detail what it was that attacked him.

“In this dream when he walks in, he’s in his white shirt, in his blazer and he stretches up his arms,” Grace recounts. “Wrapped around the entire trunk of his body, going up his body, was a demon. It was either half fish, half person, or half serpent, half person. But the bottom of it didn’t have legs...it was filled with scales and it was green.”

Jonathan Cahn: Ancient Wolves, the Occult and Christianity

What spiritual giants are at play against Christianity today?

Prophetic voice and rabbi Jonathan Cahn shared the dangers of what Christians need to know about wolves, the occult and how these things could be affecting the lives of Christians today.

In Scripture, Jesus refers to Himself as the Good Shepherd. In a culture where shepherding was so prevalent, the Jewish people knew that wolves getting into the flock would mean detriment and death to the sheep. Likewise, Satan tries to come in as a spiritual wolf to steal, kill and destroy God’s people.
