

Navy SEAL Detransitions and Warns Others about Lies of the Transgender Movement

Read time: 3 minutes 35 seconds

In a recent interview with Robby Starbuck, the nation's first transgender military member Chris Beck opened up about how he was used to further the transgender movement and the lies he was told about his identity.

Beck, who would identify as a woman named Kristin Beck, is a highly decorated member of the elite U.S. Navy Seals and served on Seal Team Six.

Beck announced his transition live on CNN during an interview with Anderson Cooper back in 2013.

"Everything you see on CNN with my face, do not even believe a word of it," Beck admitted on the recent podcast.

"I take full responsibility," he lamented. "I went on CNN and everything else, and that's why I'm here right now, I'm trying to correct that."

Navy SEAL Chris Beck came out in 2013 as transgender. @andersoncooper did a special on @cnn about it. His story was used as propaganda to allow trans people in the military and to popularize the issue. Now Chris is ready to expose the truth. Watch here:

Beck's interview with Cooper was used as a springboard for the transgender movement that has swept across the world like wildfire.

Looking back on how he had gotten to such a point, Beck regrets being so naïve as to believe the lies that were peddled to him regarding his identity and how he should move forward.

“I think that, yeah, I was used ... I was very naïve, I was in a really bad way, and I got taken advantage of. I got propagandized. I got used badly by a lot of people who had knowledge way beyond me. They knew what they were doing. I didn’t.

“But I take responsibility for that and that’s why I’m here now,” Beck explained. He has seen the damage being done to young children across America and hopes his story will help them not make irreversible decisions regarding their bodies at such young ages.

“I don’t want this to continue, and I don’t want these kids to get hurt,” Beck added.

During the interview, Beck made the bombshell admission that after an hour-long meeting with Veterans Affairs, they told him he was transgender and immediately prescribed hormone therapy.

“I had so much going wrong in my system when I started taking those,” Beck said. “Some of that was paid for by the VA, and I’m sorry to the American people that I did that.”

Beck became emotional when it came to the realization that he had been used. The pride that a man who had accomplished so much in service to his country had in turn been propagandized instead of honored.

“They used me so well. I just wanna say I’m sorry. I didn’t know what I was doing, and the women out there and all these kids, I’m sorry,” an emotional Beck said in the interview. “If they could forgive me not knowing anything—and the experts that knew definitely used that.

"I know God will forgive me," Beck said. "You don't understand how bad this is. It's the destruction of family, it's killing these kids ... I'm gonna live with this my whole life. I destroyed my life 10 years ago."

But Beck did not destroy his own life. He is still the fighter that served the United States with pride and honor, and is shining the light of truth on the lies he was fed.

And he is correct, this ideological movement has set out to destroy the nuclear family. Physicians who once took the Hippocratic Oath have tossed it to the side in the name of child mutilation and money.

This movement that seeks to distort and deceive those from their God-designed bodies is not about love or identity. It is a deception of the enemy and destroys the lives of those it gets a hold of.

For those who are suffering from a crisis of identity or are confused like Beck was, these answers are found in Jesus.

One's true identity is found within His saving knowledge and grace. The Word of God exposes Truth to the lies of the world and can guide them on a path of true purpose and fulfillment

And God can and will use the testimonies of those like Beck who have been deceived by false truths and unnatural practices. Revelation 12:11 declares victory saying, "They overcame him by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony..."

But first and foremost, the road to victory is washed by the blood of the Lamb. {eoa}
