

Officer and Civilians Killed in Manhattan Office Shooting Rampage

A gunman opened fire inside a Manhattan high-rise on July 28, 2025, killing four people, including an off-duty NYPD officer, and injuring multiple others before taking his own life. The incident occurred at 345 Park Avenue, a prominent Midtown office tower that houses major firms including Blackstone and the NFL's corporate offices.

The attacker, identified as 27-year-old Shane Tamura from Las Vegas, entered the building wearing body armor and wielding an AR-style rifle. After shooting multiple victims in the lobby, he moved to the 33rd floor, where he died by a self-inflicted gunshot. Among the dead was Officer Didarul Islam, a former NYPD officer working private security at the time. A fifth victim remains hospitalized in critical condition.

The attack has renewed concerns about security at high-profile urban office centers. Republican leaders, including Rep. Elise Stefanik and Sen. Josh Hawley, called for increased protection at private sector facilities and questioned how the attacker obtained tactical gear and weapons.

Officer Islam's death has drawn national attention. He leaves behind a pregnant wife. Law enforcement organizations are honoring his service, while federal and state officials pledge full prosecution of any accomplices, if identified. The suspect's online activity and travel history are being reviewed.
