

Parents Outraged After Teacher Identifies as Trans Wolf Named 'Lilith Deathhowl'

A group of military families at Fort Bragg is expressing deep concern about a teacher at their children's school who identifies as a transgender wolf.

With the help of Liberty Counsel, they're calling on the Department of Defense Education Activity (DoDEA) to remove the teacher from the classroom. They point to multiple disturbing examples that have confused and terrified their kindergarten and pre-K children at Mildred B. Poole Elementary School.

The Christian non-profit sent a demand letter to DoDEA on February 9, 2026, stating that multiple parents have reported "sexually inappropriate" behavior by the male, trans-identified substitute teacher and teacher's aide.

The parents are upset that administrators have allowed him to engage in "disturbing behavior" that involves dressing in feminine clothing in class, as well as wearing a dog collar with fetish tags and an animal tail.

The letter also alleges that the teacher has involved children in his sexual fetishes by doing the following:

- telling students he turns into a "wolf" at night – his fetish animal;
- directing them to howl like wolves;
- requiring them to call him by some of his online

wolf character names;

- requiring his students to address him by inaccurate female names and pronouns;
- and telling the children he is “actually a woman” who “likes boys.”

Liberty Counsel’s letter also lists several names the teacher purportedly uses, including “Roxxanne Wildheart,” “Kiera Blackheart,” “Lilith Deathhowl,” “Captain Roxxie,” “Artemis Deathhowl,” “savagebeastqueen” and many other names.
