"They're not sure at this moment exactly how many hostages still exist," says Stone. "There are the bodies of hostages in tunnels and different places that the Israelis are asking for so they can be buried back home in Israel with their families.

"I was told by someone in Gaza that the man by the name been in a tunnel for quite some time, and he had heard that the Israeli troops were pulling out of the area where he was. So, he thought he would come out of the tunnel," Stone continues.

Stone says he was told by an insider that there were "six Israeli hostages that were in that tunnel with [Sinwar]." Stone says this is believed to have happened this way so that Sinwar could negotiate [with] the hostages for his life.

"...but now, since he was coming out, he ordered them to shoot and word I got was about six different hostages that were in that tunnel," says Stone.

After revealing this shocking detail, Stone shares more of his insight into the prophetic nature of these events in a compelling manner. He draws a parallel between the current wars in the Middle East and the prophecy of wars and rumors of wars mentioned in the book of Revelation.

“There is a horse of war in the book of Revelation that is released in the Tribulation, and so we have to understand that these types of wars are motivated by evil and demonic spirits, especially when they are apt to take the lives of innocent people,” he says.

The discussion of hostages and the potential for a prisoner swap is a poignant moment in this heart-wrenching saga. Ultimately, let’s come into agreement with Stone in prayer for the Holy Land, that God’s precious hand will be on the people of Israel.
