

Perry Stone Warns America About the Next Coming Attack

Is the next attack coming to America?

In a new message, Perry Stone is warning Americans about the potential next attack that could be coming to the United States.

Stone provided information he claims to have had a source give him from the dark web regarding the Cloud Strike incident that glitched the technological systems of companies around the world, including major airlines, delaying flights for days. Stone has never used the dark web, but according to his source, it was known on the dark web not to travel over those coming days.

"I do know people who have monitored it [the dark web], and are presently monitoring the information on it. They just come on as a person, just as a regular person," Stone says.

"The information I am giving you comes out of the dark web," he continues. "He said to me personally sitting at a table [that] two weeks before the Cloud Strike antivirus software failed and caused all of these delays, there was a warning on the dark web to avoid traveling around that time frame because all the majority of planes would be grounded."

Stone says that the source of this information is usually correct about the information they learn. Now, Stone is warning the world about the newest piece of intel that the United States power grid will be the next target.

"The United States has 7,300 power plants, we have 160,000 miles of high voltage lines, we have millions and millions of miles of low voltage lines, connecting 145 million customers," says Stone. "This person has stated from his information there will be an attack coming somewhere between August to the election."

Stone says it can be easy to see the plausibility of something like this happening before the election in order to disrupt our voting. However, regardless if this happens this year or later, Stone notes that we can expect something like this to happen at one time or another and now is the time to prepare.

"If it doesn't happen this year, it will eventually happen," Stone says. "So, just stop and think on a personal level, two weeks, three weeks, what would you do in the event that this would happen, and then plan a little bit for it."

While we should plan, Stone notes that we should not go overboard with preparations.

"Don't go crazy and start hoarding and fill up your house with all kinds of stuff. That's not what we're talking about here," he continues.
