Locke says that during the conference he is there to minister at, a woman came up to him with such enthusiasm about his presence there.

"She said, 'Pastor Locke, we waited on you for hours,'" Locke recounts.

Locke says that after some scheduled dates and meetings were accidentally written down incorrectly, these people excited about his visit waited with much anticipation and even made a meal, prayed and sang songs, not knowing when he would arrive, but stayed patient for Locke's coming.

"When she said that it wrecked me," Locke says. "And I thought, 'man, where's the hunger in the American church? They weren't waiting on Greg Locke. They were waiting on somebody to deliver the goods of the gospel of God's Word.'"

“It just showed me the hunger of people around the world for the things of God,” he says.

In a world where distractions often take precedence, Pastor Greg Locke’s experience in Israel serves as a powerful reminder of the passionate hunger for the things of God. The woman’s dedication—waiting for hours with songs, prayer and a meal—was not just about waiting for a human presence, but for the life-changing power of the gospel.

As we face a culture that often diminishes spiritual urgency, Pastor Locke’s encounter highlights the urgent need for revival in our hearts and churches. Just as the believers in Israel waited expectantly for a messenger of the Gospel, we too must cultivate a spirit of eager anticipation for Christ’s return and His transformative power in our lives. Let us be reminded that when we are hungry for God’s Word, incredible things happen—He steps into the room, and everything changes.
