

President Trump Credits the 'Hand of God' for His Miraculous Survival

President Trump is giving all glory to God for protecting him after last year's assassination attempt.

Journalist Salena Zito told Fox News about what she witnessed at the Butler, Pennsylvania rally last year, and how the president credited the Lord for his survival afterward.

"I see him grab his ear. I see the blood streak across his face," Zito said during the Brian Kilmeade Show.

Zito, who was supposed to interview Trump following the rally, said he called her the following day to see how she and her family were doing. In total, Zito says he called her "seven times that day."

When asked about why he took certain actions while in survival mode, Zito says that he: "[Trump] comes to the conclusion, several times, that it was the hand of God."

This powerful testimony reminds believers that God's hand is sovereign over every circumstance—even in moments of great danger and uncertainty. President Trump's acknowledgment that the "hand of God" spared his life points back to a vital truth for the Christian community: our lives and purposes are held in God's mighty hands, and He protects and preserves those He calls for His divine plans.

For Christians, this story is a call to trust fully in God's purpose and protection. Just as the president was reminded that his life was preserved for a higher calling, we too can rest in the assurance that God is working all things together for good in our lives.
