

Prophecy In Action? Israeli Foreign Minister Calls on Jews Around the World to Immigrate to Israel

Against the backdrop of rising antisemitism, Israeli Foreign Minister Gideon Sa'ar is calling on Jews from a number of countries to make "Aliyah" (immigrate to Israel).

"We stand for the right of every Jew to live in security anywhere. But today, I am calling on Jews in the United Kingdom, Australia, France, Canada, and Belgium to immigrate to Israel," Sa'ar told participants at the "J-50" Forum.

Sa'ar founded the forum in May to create a direct, ongoing dialogue with Jewish community leaders worldwide. It provides them with briefings, public diplomacy tools, and a platform to address rising antisemitism.

Sa'ar continued, "I want you to know that I will continue to make this call. We have learned lessons from our history. I believe it is my duty to do so and to enable Jews to raise their children in a non-hostile environment, in their true home: the Land of Israel."

Danielle Mor, vice president of Israel Allies and Global Philanthropy at the Jewish Agency, which processes those who make Aliyah, says there are eight million Jewish people in the world who are eligible to make Aliyah.

The Chairman of the Jewish Agency is hoping and planning for one million Jewish people to make Aliyah in the next five years, Mor told CBN News recently. And while that's the case, Aliyah usually takes some time.
