

Rampant Antisemitism Shocking 'Jeopardy' Host Mayim Bialik

The host of "Jeopardy!," Mayim Bialik said in a lengthy post to TikTok that "nothing has prepared" her for the rampant antisemitism she's seen in the wake of Hamas' deadly attack on Israel.

The Jewish-American actor and TV personality's 10-minute video was shared on X. In it, Bialik said there is "no excuse" for anti-Semitic behavior in the U.S., calling it "unacceptable."

"Imagine if there was a massacre of an ethnic group or a religious group, the equivalent of 50,000 Americans," she said. "And imagine if what happened after that was that, all over the world, there were marches of tens of thousands of people calling for further massacre of those people. ... That's what it feels like right now as a Jewish person."

"There has not been an experience in my lifetime that has prepared me for this," the celebrity continued. "I have heard from many people my whole life that antisemitism is growing. That the Holocaust—while we say we'll never forget—many have forgotten. And the swiftness with which the global population has seized upon the massacre of Jewish civilians living inside of a border. The swiftness with which the world has stepped up to redefine terrorism, to redefine statehood, to redefine the right of a people to exist."

Bialik, 47, went on to say there is "a strain of antisemitism that is alive and well" in America, especially on progressive college campuses.

"It is thriving at my alma mater, where the chant, 'We want a Jewish genocide,' was echoed in the quad in front of Royce Hall."

In fact, anti-Semitic language has become so commonplace on left-leaning college campuses, some donors are beginning to pull their funding from the prestigious institutions, The Times of Israel reported.
