

Sarah Huckabee Sanders to Join Fox News as Contributor

Fox News announced that Sarah Huckabee Sanders, Mike Huckabee's daughter, will be joining its team to provide political commentary.

The former White House press secretary will offer political insights and analyses to Fox News Channel, Fox Business Network, Fox News Digital, Fox Nation and the radio/podcast division, according to Fox News.

Sanders posted the news on Twitter, saying she was "excited to join @FoxNews as a contributor, looking forward to being with the @foxandfriends team for my first hit on September 6th."

Excited to join @FoxNews as a contributor, looking forward to being with the @foxandfriends team for my first hit on September 6th.

– Sarah Huckabee Sanders (@SarahHuckabee) August 22, 2019

In a statement, Sanders said she was "beyond proud to join [Fox News'] incredible stable of on-air contributors in providing political insights and analyses."

Critics joked that Sanders, who left her job at the White House in June, is the perfect candidate for Fox News commentary.

"You're a natural," one person responded to Sanders' Twitter post. "What better place for Trump's former propaganda than Trump state TV?"

Another wrote: "You weren't working for Fox News already when you were at the White House?"

Positive responses were few and far between, but one person wrote: "Thanks Sarah – You just made my day!! Mornings will be even Greater!!!"