

Shania Twain Cast in Christian Film Based on Jeremy Camp's Life

At the National Religious Broadcasters (NRB) conference in March, Christians in the entertainment industry gathered to hear what's in store next for I Can Only Imagine filmmakers Jon and Andy Erwin. Partnering with Lionsgate, the Erwins will launch Kingdom Studios, a faith-based studio that promises "to create life-changing content from a variety of talented storytellers." At the event, involved industry personnel announced a total of four projects on the horizon for Kingdom:

1. On March 20, 2020, the Erwins will release a biopic following the life of Christian recording artist Jeremy Camp. Movieguide® previously reported, "Details are sparse when it comes to what parts of Camp's story will come to the big screen, but Camp has certainly relied on God to get him through trying waters. Years ago in 2001, Camp's first wife, Melissa Lynn Henning-Camp, passed away of ovarian cancer just months into their marriage. Camp wrote his songs "I Still Believe" and "Walk By Faith" in response to the tragedy along with his memoir that published in 2003 with the same title."

Update as of April 4, 2019: K.J. Apa (Riverdale) was cast as musician Jeremy Camp, and Gary Sinise will also star in the project.

Update as of May 13, 2019: Country singer Shania Twain will star as Sinise's wife and Apa's mother. Manifest actress Melissa Roxburgh has also signed on.

2. In Jesus Revolution, Kingdom Studios will bring megachurch pastor Greg Laurie's memoir to life. The movie focuses on the Jesus Movement in the late 1960s and early 1970s and how it drastically impacted the U.S. Jon Gunn (The Case for Christ) serves as a writer alongside Jon Erwin for the project.

Click here to read the rest of this story from our content partners at Movieguide®.