

Speculation Mounts that US Could Join Iran War

President Trump abruptly left the G7 Summit Meeting in Canada on Monday to join his national security team at the White House. That has some questioning whether it's a signal that the U.S. may enter the war against Iran.

As he left the Alberta gathering, Trump wrote on Truth Social, "Iran should have signed the deal I told them to sign. What a shame, and waste of life. Simply stated, IRAN CAN NOT HAVE A NUCLEAR WEAPON. I said it over and over again. Everyone should immediately evacuate Tehran!"

A massive exodus is currently underway from Iran's capital. Trump's warnings echo Israeli officials, who urged thousands of people in Tehran to evacuate ahead of air strikes.

In the meantime, The Wall Street Journal reported that Iran is sending urgent signals to end the war and resume nuclear talks if the U.S. does not join the fighting.

Talking to ABC News, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu contended that taking out Iran's supreme leader would end the conflict and he doesn't see signs Iran is serious about ending the war.

"Well, we're going to see if Iran is serious about dismantling their nuclear program, dismantling their missile capacity, dismantling the terror axis," he said. "They terrorize everybody in the Middle East and well beyond. If they agree to all of that, obviously, you know, the war could end. If they lay down their arms, they lay down their weapons of mass death. That's different. But so far they haven't done it."

Netanyahu also declared that Israeli pilots enjoy freedom of the skies over Iran.

"We are on our way to achieving our two goals: eliminating the nuclear threat and eliminating the missile threat. When we control the skies of Tehran, we are hitting these targets, the targets of the regime," the prime minister declared.
