

State Dept Warns: Iran May Deploy Sleeper Cells in Response to US Strikes

The State Department issued a rare “Worldwide Caution” alert on June 22, 2025, warning Americans abroad to exercise increased vigilance. The advisory, part of a Department of Homeland Security bulletin, highlights elevated terror risks tied to Iran’s capability to activate sleeper cells across the U.S. in retaliation for the recent strikes on its nuclear facilities.

Domestically, the Department of Homeland Security noted that extremist individuals—motivated by anti-Israel or anti-U.S. sentiment—might exploit the situation to target government facilities, Jewish centers or other American interests. Though no credible threats are identified, federal agencies have increased monitoring of Iran-aligned operatives and Hezbollah-linked networks within the U.S.
