

Stunning Evidence of China's COVID-19 'Deadly Denial' Emerges

New evidence gathered by the U.S. and foreign intelligence services reveals that the Chinese government deceived the world about the realities of the COVID-19 virus. Now, a growing number of Americans and government leaders say it's time to hold China accountable.

A report in the form of a dossier compiled by the "Five Eyes" says China lied about the COVID-19 outbreak. The "Five Eyes" are the intelligence services of the U.S., Canada, the U.K., Australia and New Zealand. They maintain that China deceived the world with "deadly denial of human to human transmission."

"I've seen what the intelligence community has said. I have no reason to believe that they've got it wrong," insisted U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo.

Collectively, the "Five Eyes" say China has spread propaganda about the origin of the virus on social media, blaming the United States for the outbreak.

Dr. Glenn Duerr is an associate professor of International Studies at Cedarville University.

"Maybe it was foreign travelers. Maybe it had something to do with U.S. troops. They've given all kinds of conspiracy theories just to try and muddy the waters out there to get the focus off of Xi Jing Ping and the Communist Party," he explained.

The dossier further states that China refused to hand over COVID-19 viral samples so a vaccine could be developed.

Also, it indicates the virus leaked out from that level four lab in Wuhan.
