

‘The Doors Are Opening’: Millions of Bibles Poised for Iran as Regime Crumbles

American churches and ministries are gearing up, convinced that God is about to do something big in Iran. Christians are praying and getting ready for the day – maybe sooner than we think – when Iran’s doors are finally open to the gospel.

As airstrikes continue to pound Iran, Christians there are praying for God to step in and bring freedom to their country.

“They’re still gathering, and they’re still praying. And I think they’re a lot more cautious now. They’re really kind of staying closer to home if they can,” said Vision Beyond Borders President Patrick Klein.

He told CBN News that he and his Bible smuggling team recently met in Armenia, just a stone’s throw from the Iranian border.

“There’s also a lot of trucks, about a thousand oil tankers coming across the border every day, carrying oil to Western Europe. So it’s a great border. And we just went with our team and prayed at the border and asked the Lord to open the borders,” Klein explained.

Dirk Smith, Vice President at Eastern European Mission, said, “The doors are going to open up, and if they do, it’s going to be a flood. It’s going to be a flood that opens up.”

Smith’s team is ready to send a huge shipment of children’s and teen Bibles, plus other Christian books in Farsi, into Iran.
