

The Military 'Whistleblower' the Defense Department Fears

Lt. Col. Theresa Long joined ROTC at age 16 and enlisted in the Army at 17. A medical doctor and a flight surgeon, Dr. Long holds a master's degree in public health and has received specialized training in epidemiology and biostatistics, among other accomplishments.

As medical and scientific advisor to an aviation brigade, it was her job to identify risk mitigation strategies and biostatistical analysis of injuries and illnesses, including COVID-19. As such, Long is also an expert in the DOD Defense Military Epidemiology Database that tracks all military medical treatment.

Long's primary responsibility is to assess the health and needs of 20-to-30-year-old military pilots. As a medical researcher and a practicing physician, Long knew that the young pilots she serves are statistically proven to have a COVID survival rate of %.

Therefore, it was "incumbent on me to do a risk-based analysis for these patients, understand potential side effects that may impact their functionality and health and provide informed consent" to her patients.

Long raised her concerns to superior officers, who refused to listen.

As a protected "whistleblower," Long informed Sen. Ron Johnson of her concerns in a Senate hearing, saying, "We have no long-term safety data whatsoever on these vaccines, yet we are vaccinating the entire fighting force against a virus with a 99% survivability in our age population."

Shockingly, Long was then told by her superior,

"You're['expletive] right, LTC, and you should get everyone you can to take the vaccine so that we will have enough data points to determine if the vaccine is safe."

Comparing 2021 to the prior five years, Long found shocking increases in the following areas: neurological, female infertility, miscarriages, pulmonary embolisms, cancer, Bell's palsy, myocardial infarction, congenital malformations in newborns and much more.

When Long was asked in court last week if the information the military ordered her not to testify about was relevant and important to the court and the public, she said yes. I then asked, "Why?"

She paused, held back tears, looked at the judge and said, "I have so many soldiers being destroyed by this vaccine. Not a single member of my senior command has discussed my concerns with me ... I have nothing to gain and everything to lose by talking about it. I'm OK with that because I am watching people get absolutely destroyed."

The scene in the courtroom provided more evidence of the abuse and intimidation the DOD is inflicting on these brave service members.

I am appalled at the actions of our government and their attempts to bury the truth. We will not allow that to happen. No one should be forced to take a drug against their will, especially one minimally tested and statistically proven to be in a dangerous class of drugs like the COVID-19 shots.

The testimony last week of the Navy commander of a surface warship combined with the testimony of three military flight surgeons was powerful.

The medical doctors all agreed that the shots are injuring and killing people, are not preventing infections and there are other ways to treat COVID and maintain military readiness than vaccination.

Biden's DOD filed for an appeal of the preliminary injunction we won. The court battle will continue. We need your help as never before to defend liberty. {eo}
