

The Shemītah's Eerie Mystery of the Sevens

The Shemītah is marked by the number seven. It is the seventh year. Its last day, Elul 29, is the final day and climax of the biblical seven-year cycle. Is it possible that the greatest stock-market point crash in history, having taken place on the day of the Shemītah, would bear the fingerprints of the Shemītah—the mark of seven?

The following is neither central nor essential to the phenomenon of the Shemītah, but it is a fascinating phenomenon in its own right.

- The Seven-Year Mark: The greatest point crash in stock market history happened on Elul 29—the end of the seventh year and the completion of the seven-year cycle.
- The Seventh Month: On the evening of the greatest crash began the month of Tishri. Tishri is the seventh month of the sacred calendar. Thus the crash took place on the day that ushers in the most sacred of times in the biblical calendar, the seventh month.
- Seven Hundred Billion: The crash was triggered by the failure of Congress to pass the Emergency Economic Stabilization Act. The bill was a response to the economic implosion of September 2008, an attempt to save the U.S. financial system. The amount chosen for the bailout was $700,000,000,000.
- Seven Percent–2008: What percentage of Wall Street was wiped out on the last day of the seventh year? Seven percent.
- Seven Percent–2001: How much of Wall Street was wiped out seven years earlier on the last day of the preceding Shemītah in 2001? Seven percent.
- Seven-Seven-Seven: How many actual points were wiped out on the last day of the seventh year? Seven hundred seventy-seven (777).
