

This Muslim Nation is Getting Rocked by the Power of God

No matter what obstacles the enemy lays before them, Evangelist Caleb Wampler and Kingdom Encounters International are determined to see the Lord's harvest be brought in.

Six times in the last six months, Kingdom Encounters had been denied access to the Jesus-starved people of Pakistan. But Wampler and his team refused to give up. This past week, they've been preaching the gospel with fervor, and multitudes of salvations have been happening during crusades in the predominantly-Muslim country.

Over the past few days alone, more than 254,000 decisions among the Pakistani people have been made for Christ, giving Wampler and his team—and the kingdom—reasons to celebrate.

"We will labor and we will see harvest in this generation," Wampler says. "I am so excited to see what Jesus is doing right now. This is not a season to cower in fear, but to march forward in faith and to see the glory of God cover the earth as the waters cover the earth."

Wampler says this is the largest gospel campaign his ministry has ever undertaken.

"Hundreds of thousands of come to Jesus this week," he says. "We've done ministry in village churches; we did ministry on television and we have done lots of different media projects as well. It's the largest campaign budget we've ever had to raise, but we have never not seen God come through. He comes through every single time and he did it again this time. He is so faithful."

Wampler and his team plan to return to Pakistan in October. Watch the video above for more details. {eo}
