

Thousands Gather for 1Nation1Day in Honduras

The government of Honduras—including the department of governments, the military, the police and judicial departments—gathered this weekend with thousands of people, leading pastors and civic leaders for the first government transformation session for national change.

, founded by Dominic Russo, organized 1Nation1Day, a project that has attracted the largest foreign missions team in history, in Honduras. The event, which took place Friday and Saturday, was declared a national holiday by the nation's president.

Myles Munroe was a special guest at the event Friday and delivered the powerful message "Transforming Politicians Into Leaders." Honduras President Lobo Sosa has invited Munroe to return to the country to continue his training.

About 10,000 people attended Munroe's session, where he saw the spirit of kingdom transformation fill the arena. Members of Honduras' military rose to their feet in response to his message, after which he led the crowd in prayer.
