Breaking Update: Daystar President Joni Lamb's Official Statement on Recent Allegations

Daystar president and co-founder, Joni Lamb, addressed recent allegations and the decision to terminate son Jonathan Lamb's employment at the network.

In a video posted to YouTube, Lamb addressed the ongoing situation to Daystar viewers.

"Recently, Daystar made the decision to terminate my son, Jonathan Lamb's, employment," Lamb says. "That decision was not taken lightly. It followed a 15-month review of Jonathan's performance and his refusal to take any steps to satisfy a detailed performance improvement plan put in place. He also refused my offer to participate in a formal mediation to resolve grievances in a biblical and professional manner."

TD Jakes: 'Let Him Go in Peace'

Bishop T.D. Jakes, one of the most prominent voices in modern Christianity, experienced a medical emergency during his sermon last Sunday. Reports suggest he suffered a seizure, leaving many within the faith community pondering the spiritual and physical implications of such an event. As his sermon transitioned from a heartfelt prayer to instructions for giving, Bishop Jakes' vulnerability seemed to surface, culminating in the abrupt health crisis.

The moment was poignant, especially given his closing words: "I still love to preach. I ain't tired of preaching. I miss you, I miss you." This sentiment shines a light on the paradox that many in ministry face—the deep love for their calling weighed against the demands that come with it. For Jakes, who had recently returned from ministering in Zimbabwe for The Jubilee Conference earlier in November, the strain of global ministry likely compounded the exhaustion.

In the aftermath of the incident, Bishop Jakes' daughter, Sarah Jakes Roberts, and her husband, Touré Roberts, provided an update on his condition through social media. They assured the faith community that Bishop Jakes is in stable condition and recovering well from the incident.

Chris Reed Prophecy Fulfilled: Pam Bondi and America's Future

While we only know and prophesy in part, the Lord speaks through His prophets to share what we can expect to see in the future.

In a new video, Chris Reed shared a prophetic word he heard from the Lord back on Nov. 23, 2019 about Pam Bondi and the role she would play in America. Now that she has been selected by Donald Trump as the incoming Attorney General, the timing of this word appears to be for this current season and time.

"This is a Facebook post; you can find it on my Facebook," Reed begins. "Nov. 23, 2019: Pam Bondi former attorney general of Florida. You have been chosen prophetically by God to become a great voice for justice and fairness in America. Your days of serving this great nation are not over."
