

Trump Cabinet to Meet at Camp David

President Trump will travel to Camp David to hold a cabinet meeting amid ongoing talks with Iran.

Officials are set to discuss “recent successes of the administration including economy and small business wins, Task Force to Eliminate Fraud highlights, and foreign policy updates,” a White House official told the New York Post.

Outgoing Director of National Intelligence Tulsi Gabbard is also set to attend the meeting.

“The Enriched Uranium (Nuclear Dust!) will either be immediately turned over to the United States to be brought home and destroyed or, preferably, in conjunction and coordination with the Islamic Republic of Iran, destroyed in place or, at another acceptable location, with the Atomic Energy Commission, or its equivalent, being witness to this process and event,” Trump wrote. “Thank you for your attention to this matter!”

This week, the United States targeted Iranian missile sites in what it called “self-defense strikes.”

“The United States committed a gross violation of the ceasefire in the Hormozgan region in the past 48 hours,” the Iranian Foreign Ministry said in response to the strikes, as reported by The Hill. “Iran holds the U.S. regime responsible for all the consequences resulting from these aggressive and unjustified actions.”

Discussing the strikes, Secretary of State Marco Rubio told reporters, "The President's expressed his desire to make it – he's either going to make a good deal or no deal. So on that, everyone should be assured. But that may take a little while, I mean, a few more days." When asked if the strikes would affect negotiations, Rubio asserted that the "straits have to be open. They're going to be open one way or the other."
