

Trump Gives Stark 'Instructions' in Case of Assassination Attempt

President Trump is going all with his agenda, unafraid of what may come against him.

Vowing that Iran will not have nuclear weapons under his administration, Trump is going the extra mile, writing instructions in case the Middle Eastern nation attempts to assassinate him.

"That would be a terrible thing for them to do," Trump says. "If they did that they would be obliterated. That would be the end. I've left instructions. If they do it, they get obliterated. There won't be anything left, and they shouldn't be able to do it."

Trump has made it clear that he will not back down from his stance on Iran, and continues to show America's strength throughout the world.

While the president is wildly popular with people across the world, there are also those who despise him vehemently. With two attempts that happened against his life last year, he knows the reality of how many enemies he also has. Case in point, today there are protests taking place against Trump in all 50 states organized by the 50501 Movement. As Trump moves to now sign the executive order against transgender athletes from women's sports, we can assume that the Left will be outraged.

For Christians, this is a call to prayer against any murderous and slanderous spirits that are seeking to harm the president. There is a true spiritual battle taking place, and we know that the weapons of our warfare are not carnal. Continue to pray for Trump as he moves toward making a drastic difference for the good of our nation and the world.
