

Trump Rejects Iran Deal as 'Not Good Enough,' Warns of Major Consequences

President Trump commented on the latest ceasefire proposal from Iran, noting that while it was "significant," it was "not good enough."

"They made a proposal, and it's a significant proposal. It's a significant step. It's not good enough, but it's a very significant step," Trump told reporters. "They have made and they're negotiating now, and they've made a very significant step. We'll see what happens."

Iran's response was shared by the state-run IRNA news agency. Demands include a permanent end to the war, lifting sanctions, and a means of safe passage along the Strait of Hormuz.

To order Troy Anderson's new book, Designated Disrupter, visit .

Responding to a 15 point proposal, the Iranian government said, "The Iranian Foreign Ministry officially rejects the reported '15-point' U.S. proposal as 'unrealistic,'" the Iranian government wrote on X. "Iran firmly refuses any negotiations conducted under the shadow of illegal sanctions, military threats, or coercion. #Diplomacy requires mutual respect, not pressure."

According to a previous report from Press TV, specific conditions under which Iran could agree to end the war include:

Recognition and guarantees that the Strait of Hormuz is in Iran's control

- A halt to “aggression and assassinations”
- Establishing means of ensuring the conflict is not restarted on Iran
- War reparations
- The conclusion of conflict across all fronts and resistance groups in the region

Trump has signaled a deadline to reach an agreement with Iran. “Remember when I gave Iran ten days to MAKE A DEAL or OPEN UP THE HORMUZ STRAIT. Time is running out – 48 hours before all Hell will reign down on them. Glory be to GOD!” he wrote.

This article originally appeared on American Faith and is reposted with permission.