

Trump's Inauguration Day Bibles: A Sign of Revival?

At noon Donald J. Trump will be inaugurated as the 47th President of the United States. And the Bibles that he will lay his hand on and swear his oath of office on just may have prophetic symbol of revival coming to America.

Trump will use not one, but two Bibles today for the swearing-in ceremony of today's 60th presidential inauguration. One, of the Bibles Trump will use is the Lincoln Bible, which was first used in 1861 for Abraham Lincoln's inauguration and has been used only three times since: by President Obama for his two inaugurations and by Trump during his first inauguration in 2017, according to Fox News.

The second Bible Trump will use was given to him by his mother in 1955, which was from his "mark his Sunday Church Primary School graduation at First Presbyterian Church in Jamaica, New York," a press release given to Fox states.

This Bible, however, has a history behind it that speaks of the power of prayer for revival.

The Hebrides Revival Bible that Trump will be using was discussed in a video posted on X by Dr. Malachi O' Brien of Dr. Clarence Sexton, which explains the significance behind it.

"Two old women, one was 84-years-old, and the other was 82-years-old," says Sexton. "They had passion for couldn't even get out to the church to pray, they couldn't even get out to the church to worship. Their house became a place to get so passionate about revival."

Sexton explains how the Lord blessed the two ladies, and the power of God was seen moving in Scotland. During this revival, a young teenage boy named Donald was saved. This young man became on fire for the Lord. Donald's cousin, Mary Anne Smith MacLeod immigrated to the United States. The elderly ladies, were Mary Anne's aunts who then sent her a Bible from this revival. This woman was the mother of Donald J. Trump, who named her son after the young teenager who was impacted by the revival in Scotland. Now it is this same Hebrides Revival Bible that changed so many lives years ago that Trump will use today during his swearing in.

"I believe God is putting some things together to give us just a window," says Sexton.

Now as Trump prophetically lays his hand on a revival Bible, let's pray that revival truly is on the horizon for America.
