

Trump's Return and America's Divine Reprieve

As I reflect on the unprecedented events we've witnessed, I'm filled with a deep sense of awe and urgency about what God is doing in America.

With President Donald Trump's anticipated return to the White House in January 2025, it's clear that the forces of globalism—the World Economic Forum's Great Reset plan, the United Nations' Agenda 2030 and other initiatives pushing toward centralized global governance—are facing a major setback.

Many of us in the faith community believe this shift is not just political but profoundly spiritual, marking a divine reprieve from the unfolding events foretold in the book of Revelation. I believe God is calling us to seize this moment to share the Good News of Jesus Christ, bring in a final Great Awakening and prepare the body of Christ for what lies ahead.

In my new book, "The Trump Code," and during our 40 Days to Save America campaign, we've emphasized the need for prayer, fasting and repentance. I am now urging President Trump to call on Americans to pray, repent and seek God's guidance and blessing in his inaugural address. Over the weekend, one of President Trump's lawyers and a golfing partner delivered this message to him, including a video I recorded: "An Open Letter to President Trump, Urging Him to Lead America in Prayer, Repentance and Revival!"

If he does this, I believe it would be the "Nineveh Moment" Billy Graham spoke of in my 2013 interview with him, an opportunity for America to not only turn back to God but also see revival grow throughout the nation and the world.

Joined by our “77 Days to Take Back America: Igniting the Final Great Awakening” initiative, encouraging people to keep praying, fasting and repenting from Nov. 5 to Jan. 20, 2025, Inauguration Day, this movement is a call for believers to unite in prayer, trusting that God is giving us an opportunity to reclaim our nation and push back against the globalist agenda.

Globalists and Their Response to Trump's Return

The return of President Trump to office has stirred up anxiety among globalist entities like the United Nations and World Economic Forum. Figures like historian, philosopher and the best-selling author Yuval Noah Harari have openly acknowledged that Trump's nationalist stance could be a “death blow” to the new global order. Harari's words highlight the stark divide between the globalist vision and the rise of nationalism, which, to me, is a reflection of God's hand giving us a chance to reaffirm our sovereignty and resist policies that infringe on our freedom and faith.

This is why Trump's “America First” message resonates so strongly with those of us who believe national sovereignty and religious freedom should never be sacrificed on the altar of global governance.

Trump's reelection could fundamentally reshape alliances and international relationships. Within NATO, European leaders like those in France and Germany worry that a refocused American stance may leave them with no choice but to invest more in their own defense strategies. Trump's call for other nations to carry their weight is, I believe, a wake-up call for the entire world to assume responsibility for their future rather than leaning on the U.S. as a safety net.

The Rise of New Global Powers: A Cause for Caution

There is a valid concern that weakening global institutions like the United Nations could embolden countries such as China and Russia, allowing them to expand their influence unchecked. China's recent moves to secure roles within the U.N., paired with its Belt and Road Initiative, are concerning for those of us who understand the spiritual and prophetic dimensions at play.

While critics argue that scaling back U.S. involvement might create a vacuum, I see this as an opportunity for America to strengthen bilateral alliances, avoid the pitfalls of globalism and focus on what's best for our nation and the kingdom of God.

The stakes have never been higher in the battle between nationalism and globalism, a conflict that reaches far beyond politics and into the heart of our faith. Leaders like those in Hungary and Italy reflect the rising tide of national sovereignty, standing against policies that threaten traditional values, erode national identity and weaken faith-based principles.

This resistance to globalism, as explored in "The Trump Code," as I see it, is not just about policy; it's a matter of spiritual integrity. At its core, it's a battle for the soul of America and nations worldwide, challenging us to hold fast to our Judeo-Christian beliefs in an era that seeks to redefine truth and reshape our identities.

This is why, as we journey through the “40 Days to Save America” campaign, our mission is clear: Pray fervently, repent deeply and stand boldly for righteousness. I believe that as we respond to this call, we can help restore America and bring about a historic revival, a season where God’s light shines through the darkest times.

America at a Crossroads

President Trump’s commitment to national sovereignty is challenging the status quo of global governance. As Christians, this moment is an invitation to seek God’s wisdom, stand firm in our faith and take action to influence our culture and nation. This is an opportunity that can’t be missed.

I truly believe we are on the edge of a historic time of awakening—a reprieve given by God for His purposes. As we stand together in prayer, let us use this moment to witness to others, to spread the gospel and to work for a brighter future.

With this heavenly reprieve, we have the chance to see a revival sweep across America and to bring about the final Great Awakening. Now is the time to join together, pray without ceasing and boldly step into God’s plan for our nation.
