

Voters Compelled to Research Candidates Before Heading to the Polls

The 2020 iVoterGuide Presidential and Vice-Presidential Voter Guide provides millions of voters fact-based, heavily researched reviews of how each candidate has used the power of public office.

Linked articles throughout the entire website deliver facts to voters who want to make an informed vote about our presidential and vice-presidential candidates. Since too many voters are uninformed about those and other down-ballot positions, this inclusive and wide-ranging voter guide provides voters with an easy-to-navigate tool to help make wise decisions about who should be entrusted with power to impact their lives.

“Too few voters, even seasoned voters, are knowledgeable about the vice-presidential candidates and how they’ve handled power, which could be more important this year given the unlikelihood of the current presidential candidates serving beyond 2024,” says iVoterGuide president, Debbie Wuthnow. “We at iVoterGuide want to change that.”

The iVoterGuide Presidential Voter Guide provides much-needed in-depth, accurate research about the candidates’ positions on key issues, scorecards from organizations that scored their votes while in office, endorsements, selected contributions, a candidate issue survey and other additional background information that only iVoterGuide provides with such precision.

iVoterGuide gives voters the ability to see a balanced narrative about the accomplishments of each candidate from dozens of sources across the spectrum, from The Wall Street

Journal to the Heritage Foundation, CNN to Fox News, World magazine to The New York Times, with links to the original sources for voters to read for themselves.

A critical question iVoterGuide helps voters answer is, “What have elected officials done with their power and responsibility while in office?”

“iVoterGuide research shows the clear contrast between the directions the Trump/Pence and Biden/Harris administrations would take America, based on actions they have taken in the past,” explains Wuthnow.

Key research available at includes links to source data in order to by-pass media narratives of the candidates and read/decide for themselves:

–Donald Trump: Summary of policy actions by President Trump’s administration—including important measures receiving limited media attention, such as how the judiciary has been reshaped by President Trump’s appointments.

–Joe Biden: Significant inflection points of his key political positions over the last 40 years, including the legacy impact of the Criminal Justice legislation initially sponsored by Senator Biden in 1994 that laid the foundation for some of the unrest we’re seeing today. Links to read Joe Biden’s Green New Deal, and his plan to advance LGBTQ-plus equality and build on Obamacare.

–Kamala Harris: Highlights of her record in the U.S. Senate and significant actions as Attorney General of California.

–Research on Libertarian Jo Jorgensen and her running mate, Jeremy “Spike” Cohen, who both completed the iVoterGuide candidate issue survey.
