

Walmart Apologizes for Making an ISIS Decorative Cake

A Louisiana Walmart refused to bake a cake with a Confederate flag, but did decorate one with the Islamic State flag, according to a video.

Chuck Netzhammer said his cake with the words “Heritage not hate,” printed over the Confederate flag was rejected.

Yet the store gave no qualms when he requested a cake with the ISIS flag.

“They happen to be somebody we’re fighting against right now who are killing our men and boys overseas and are beheading Christians,” Netzhammer says in the video.

A Walmart spokesman told the Daily Caller the store made a mistake, and the ISIS flag cake should never have been baked.

“We made the decision to stop selling Confederate flag related items promoting the flag’s image. For that reason we did not make the cake. [Netzhammer] brought in the other image of ISIS and really, what happened, was our associate didn’t recognize what that image was and what it meant or it wouldn’t have been made,” Walmart spokesman Randy Hargrove told the news site.
