

Walmart Follows Target's Lead and Promotes New 'Pride' Apparel

Brace yourselves, "Pride Month" is coming. And with it comes the continuing inundation of LGBTQ ideology and flags, as well as half-naked (in some cases fully nude) people marching in parades across the world.

This year, Target has previously announced it is dialing back the company's "Pride" displays, as the massive backlash from 2023 and the retail firm's targeting of children cost it billions in market value.

Not to be outdone on the radical, left-wing ideology metrics, Walmart has entered the fray in advance of June.

In a post to Instagram, Walmart social coordinators posted, "Not just a slogan. #PrideAlways is a reminder to lead with love.[]"
