This unsettling video of a humanoid robot violently lashing out at a human is a sobering reminder of the warnings found in biblical prophecy about the end times. As artificial intelligence and robotics continue to evolve, many are asking whether we are approaching a time when machines could challenge the very sanctity of human life—something the Bible warns will be under attack in the final days.

In Revelation 13, the Bible speaks of an image of the beast that is given “breath” and is able to speak and cause those who do not worship it to be killed. Could this robot outburst show the beginning signs of this prophecy already in action?

As humans create lifelike machines with the capacity for autonomous decision-making, the line between tool and being becomes blurred. Could we be laying the groundwork for a system that eventually forces compliance and punishes dissent, just as Revelation foretells?
