

WATCH: Persecuted Christian Bakers Standing on Isaiah 43:1 After Losing Gay Cake Suit

While “disappointed,” the owners of Ashers Baking Company are not without hope.

“We are upset things haven’t gone our way,” Karen McArthur says. ” ... But it doesn’t change how we feel about God.”

The McArthurs are just one example of the onslaught of Christian persecution through financial attacks.

The couple refused to bake a cake for a gay wedding ceremony in Ireland, launching a lawsuit where the plaintiff says the rejection made him feel “unworthy” and a “lesser person.”

The McArthurs were not intimidated, though, by his—or the court’s—demands and stand by their biblical foundations.
