

We Have Entered the 'Gulf of America' Era

It's official; the Gulf of America is here to stay.

Google Maps has officially made the change to their maps for people inside of the United States. No longer are the days of the Gulf of Mexico for U.S. residents, but instead we are finally seeing the phrase "Gulf of America" on the map.

Part of the American dream has long been intertwined with the concept of Manifest Destiny, that it is the goal to grow the nation by spreading westward. Could the renaming of the Gulf also be part of that dream? It undoubtedly shows the strength and expansion of the United States to the rest of the world, as President Trump has gone in and torn down the weakness and wokeness of the previous administration, and is showing his competence and ability to stabilize what was lost.

This was one of Trump's promises made that he has so far kept. From a spiritual perspective, when we look at this and discussions about the U.S. purchasing Greenland, the Panama Canal and Canada, along now with Gaza, are we closer to one international government? Will this be the end of America and the start of something new?

While we do not know the future, we can be sure that throughout this new presidential administration we will see major changes take place throughout the United States and the world.
