

What Was Revealed in Kim Clement's Final Prophecy?

In his final prophecy prior to his death, Kim Clement spoke of the necessity of God's people to get back to the core of the apostolic church and the mighty ways in which God desires to move through His people.

On Sept. 5, 2015, Clement gave his final prophecy which included a cry of 2 Chronicles 7:14.

"The Spirit of God would say, today, there is a recovery that is happening. If My people, who are called by My name, [would] humble themselves, pray, turn from their wicked ways, I will hear from heaven. I hear not the sound of secular humanists. I hear not the sound of the religious system. Many churches today are being crucified between two thieves and erroneous false religious system[s] and man-made laws and secular humanism," Clement prophesied.

It was then that Clement heard about a time that would come when God would breathe into His people and land. God's people would also need to build their foundation upon Jesus and Jesus alone.

"I will breathe into their businesses, I'll breathe into their creations, I'll breathe into their industry and their artistry. I will breathe into my people and there shall be light that shall come forth, says the Lord," Clement prophesied. "There are many that built their houses on there are those that have built their house on the rock. And the storms have come, and they have remained."

Clement's prophecy also touched on something we are seeing right now as campus revivals continue to pour out across America – the saving of America's children.

"Save our children, save our colleges, save our universities, save our nation, Lord God. The people that are crying to you," Clement prayed.

It is this revival for the nation that was placed heavily on Clement's heart.

"We are at the beginning stage of a reformation. People laugh at me when I say that. We are at the beginning stage of a recover apostolic Christianity. We need to return to the basics, the foundation of our first century faith," he said.

If we return to these basics, if we seek God with our entire heart, we can be sure to see the Lord move across our country.

"Before I take My people to Myself, I wish to sweep across every nation and present Myself one final time," Clement prophesied.

The time is continuing to grow short, and the harvest is plentiful. We must do as Jesus commanded and go make disciples. It is the gospel alone that will bring the revival our nation needs.
