"When you look at Revelation, you see the colors are there; the colors of the Apocalypse are the Four Horsemen or the riders and the Four Horsemen," Cahn says. "And the Apocalypse ultimately converges on Israel in Armageddon in the end ... of course you have the white horse; then you have the red horse, symbolizing war; then you have the black horse with famine and want; then you have the pale green horse, which is death."

Cahn points out that these colors of the Apocalypse are the same colors of the Palestinian flag.

"If you look at what was appearing all over these protests against Israel from Harvard to around the world in the West Bank in Gaza, you saw the colors of the Apocalypse," he explains. "The flag of Palestine is white, red, and black and green."

This uncanny connection between Israel, Revelation and the Palestinian flag is just one of many mysteries Cahn unlocks in his new book, "The Dragon's Prophecy: Israel, the Dark Resurrection, and the End of Days," which releases on Tuesday, Sept. 3.
