

Constant Revival in Your Heart Depends Greatly Upon This Habitual Discipline

Wouldn't you like to live in a constant state of revival where the closeness of God's presence is very real? The good news is we can live in such a state.

God has created us in such a way that we are likened to temples, places where God dwells. Part of the process of learning to dwell in the presence of God is giving ourselves over to that focus. We have to be intentional about having an awakened life in His presence. What can really help us is triggers or reminders. We need things to help remind us of what we are doing and where we are going.

This has everything to do with our meditation. Finding ways to remind ourselves to stay on the path and direction of His presence will create a consistency in our lives. Through this we will grow much more rapidly in our sensitivity to His presence, living in a perpetual state of revival.

What we listen to, what we see and meditate upon will guide us. Because of this, we need to choose the right things to take us on this journey of revival in His presence. Implement this in your life and watch things begin to change! {eo}
