

Could the Iran Crisis Signal the Last Days? 4 Prophetic Signs From the Bible

Are we seeing the signs of the final days play out right in front of our eyes?

As the Daily Mail pointed out in a recent article, Scripture is full of passages that point to wars, Israel and what is still set to take place.

Below are the four biblical signs they point to as we see tensions escalate in the Middle East.

1. Matthew 24: The Escalation of Global Conflict

In Matthew 24, Jesus gave His disciples a glimpse of the world leading up to His return. One of the clearest signs He described was a rise in global conflict.

“You will hear of wars and rumors of wars,” Jesus said. “See that you are not troubled; for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet.”

He went on to explain that nation would rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom—a growing turbulence among nations that would mark what He called “the beginning of sorrows.”

The rising tensions involving Iran, Israel and the United States fit squarely within the kind of geopolitical unrest Jesus described. The Middle East has long been a prophetic epicenter, and what we are seeing happen right now is a reminder that the world is moving closer to the events foretold in Scripture.

2. Ezekiel 38: Persia's Role in the Last Days

Another passage frequently discussed in connection with modern Iran is the prophecy of Gog and Magog found in Ezekiel 38 and 39.

To order James Lasher's book, The Revelation of Jesus, visit .

In that prophecy, Ezekiel lists several nations that will one day form a coalition against Israel—including Persia, the ancient name for modern-day Iran.

The significance of what is yet to come is impossible to ignore. Thousands of years ago, Scripture identified Persia as part of a future alliance that would rise against the Jewish state. Could this freedom from the Islamic regime ultimately usher in the Persia of Scripture?

3. Damascus and the Prophetic Shadow Over Syria

Another prophetic passage the Daily Mail discussed is from the prophet Isaiah, which concerns the ancient city of Damascus.

Isaiah 17:1 contains a startling prophecy: “Behold, Damascus will cease from being a city and will become a ruinous heap.”

Damascus is widely considered one of the world's oldest continuously inhabited cities. Yet prophecy tells us of a future moment of catastrophic destruction.

Because Syria has become a key staging ground for Iranian military activity and proxy forces, some prophecy observers believe Damascus could play a significant role in future regional conflict. If tensions between Israel and Iran continue to escalate, Syria's strategic position could place

Damascus directly in the path of war.

4. 1 Thessalonians 5: A Call to Spiritual Awareness

In 1 Thessalonians 5, the apostle Paul warned that the day of the Lord would come “like a thief in the night.” He wrote that when people say, “Peace and safety,” sudden destruction can come unexpectedly.

But Paul also gave believers a powerful reminder: “You, brethren, are not in darkness, so that this Day should overtake you as a thief.”

This means that the message, ultimately, is not one of fear, but of spiritual alertness.

As tensions grow across the Middle East and nations position themselves in increasingly dramatic ways, we are reminded that the Bible foresaw a turbulent world leading up to Christ’s return.
