

Crypto, AI and the End Times: Is the U.S. Leading the Future?

Yesterday, President Trump signed an executive order directed at none other than cryptocurrency. However, could the signing of this executive order have a greater play at hand in relation to our position in the end times?

The purpose behind Trump's order was to "promote the advancement of cryptocurrencies in the U.S." and "work toward potentially developing a national digital asset stockpile," according to CNBC.

This goal of building a national stockpile of digital currency is not necessarily a good or bad thing in and of itself. However, could there be greater prophetic implications of what this means?

Prophetic voice Tomi Arayomi has previously warned people that we are in the time of needing to build a "Goshen," or rather save up on the goods, supplies, talents and business opportunities that we can because he believes we are headed into a time of famine.

"I believe that after 2030 the world is going to change dramatically," Arayomi previously told Katie Souza.

"I'm talking about a famine of credit, a famine of banking, a famine of heating, lighting, electricity,” Arayomi further explains. “And the Lord spoke to me that what is considered money is going to go through another revolution.”

Arayomi also believes the future of currency across the globe will be backed by gold and silver. He urges that while we have the time and the opportunity, we must do what we can to prepare for the years of famine.
