

Did the Biblical Prophet Zechariah Predict the Current Bleeding-Eye Pandemic in Uganda?

A current Ugandan outbreak of viral hemorrhagic fever (VHF) and an ancient outbreak among the Aztecs 500 years ago may both have been described in prophecy as being the result of conflict surrounding Jerusalem.

Uganda's health ministry announced on Monday that it is deploying emergency response teams to prevent a recent outbreak of viral hemorrhagic fever (VHF) from turning into a raging pandemic.

The two different pandemics, one ancient and another current, have come to the media's attention this week, identical in their common symptom of profuse bleeding from the eyes. Experts from the World Health Organization (WHO) announced that the disease has a 40 percent mortality rate, and they were monitoring for the possibility of an additional outbreak after reports of several cases displaying similar symptoms in South Sudan.
