

Fostering Cultural Engagement From Prophets

This is part three of a three-part article. Find part one at this link and part two at this one.

Prophetic individuals are uniquely positioned to influence political and social spheres profoundly. They carry a vision of God's justice and righteousness that can challenge the status quo and inspire transformative change. Here are key areas where prophets can make a significant impact, particularly in combating woke extremism and liberal ideology:

1. Advocating for the marginalized. Prophetic voices must speak out for the oppressed and marginalized. Just as Moses stood before Pharaoh to demand freedom for the Israelites, modern prophets must confront unjust systems and advocate for society's vulnerable. This includes standing against policies that harm the unborn, the disabled and the elderly.

2. Promoting traditional family values. Prophetic voices should uphold the biblical definition of family and marriage. This involves opposing ideologies that would undermine these sacred institutions and advocating for policies supportive of family stability, parental rights and the sanctity of marriage.

3. Defending free speech and religious liberty. In a culture where cancel culture and censorship threaten free expression, those called to prophecy must defend the right to speak truth and practice faith without fear of retribution. This includes opposing policies and movements that would attempt to silence dissenting voices and restrict religious freedoms.

4. Championing justice and mercy. While promoting justice, prophetic voices should also stress the importance of mercy, forgiveness and redemption. This involves opposing punitive measures that eliminate compassion and advocating for restorative justice practices aligned with biblical principles.

5. Influencing national affairs. Prophetic individuals should engage with national issues that impact righteousness and justice. This includes participating in political processes, supporting legislation that aligns with biblical principles and holding leaders accountable to ethical standards. It also means opposing policies that promote moral relativism, gender confusion and all other forms of ideological extremism.
