

God Longs to Be Known by You

Liz Wright shared incredible encounters in a recent episode of her podcast show, “Live Your Best Life.” Now is the time to engage with the experiential love of God like never before. There is an urgency in the hour to set our hearts toward Him and accept His holy invitation. This invitation is one of knowing Him: deeply, vulnerably and ever increasingly.

One of the greatest longings in the heart of God is that we would know Him. In all His power and might, Jesus chooses to be vulnerable by expressing this genuine desire. We are the wife of the Lamb and there is an opportunity in this day to move into a greater revelation of our Bridegroom King. There are holy gathering places of preparation on the Earth right now where people are coming together to linger at His feet. This is where Jesus is choosing to share Himself in this vulnerable way with His bride.

In this episode, Liz shared encounters with Jesus she has recently experienced, which reveal this sacred invitation to journey into His heart. Liz explains that when you know His heart, you become whole and get delivered from self-consciousness. You become fully empowered in your relationship with the Lord and can begin to co-reign with your King!

The heart of God is the center of all creation. From the position of oneness, we'll release His transforming light into the world and obliterate the darkness in an unprecedented way. Liz says, “As you enter into God's heart, you come home.” There is an acceleration underway where we will live in union with God in such a manner that our hearts will be completely secure and fulfilled. Say yes to this next level of revelation. He's longing for a bride living in a mature union.
