

Have Consciences in California Been Seared?

The Facts

Most might agree that California is slipping into an ocean of political correctness—from forced vaccines and protection of criminals, to the handcuffing of law enforcement officers, to homelessness and financial woes. Are there answers? I believe there are, but it begins with the difficult process of self-examination and taking personal responsibility.

I respect the offices of government. I'm assuming that most are sincere in their efforts, but we can be sincerely wrong. Clearly, our consciences have been seared. For example:

—When we are worried about plastic straws but not babies in the womb, our consciences have been seared. I'm all for cleaning our oceans, but the safest place in the world—the womb—is now the most dangerous. Moreover, a bill was recently passed that opens the door for abortions on college campuses.

—When we call ourselves a sanctuary state but lack safety and refuge for our own citizens, our consciences have been seared.

—When public schools (originally created to teach the Bible) promote evolution and say that we are animals without hope and purpose, our consciences have been seared. Noah Webster, the father of American scholarship and education, said, “In my view, the Christian religion is the most important and one of the first things in which all children, under a free government, ought to be instructed.” Sadly, in order to be politically correct, Noah Webster's Scripture references have been withdrawn from more recent editions of the dictionary that bears his name. (For more on what the Founding Fathers actually believed, download my free e-book, One Nation Above God, at).

–When we allow transgenders to read to our children and pass resolutions telling pastors to embrace LGBTQ beliefs, our consciences have been seared. The pulpits do not need to be silenced, they need to be unshackled and unhindered. Repentance is the only hope for anyone caught in a destructive lifestyle. Pastors who fear God more than man will do just that—preach the full counsel of God’s truth including repentance. (For more, listen to my hour-long interview on Fox News at and watch a short clip, “This Pulpit Won’t Be Silent,” on YouTube.)

–When Sacramento passes bills to protect pedophiles and harm law enforcement officers, our consciences have been seared. In August, our state approved one of the strictest deadly force measures in the United States. Officers can now be in fear of losing everything, including possibly being charged with murder, if they use deadly force. We have lost our minds. Do we really want to handcuff our law enforcement officers this way? Yes, there is always a need to improve, but throwing out the baby with the bathwater is not the answer. Did you know it’s no longer a crime in California to refuse to assist a police officer if they need help? God help us. We’re going to run off all committed officers and leave California crime-ridden and open game. To our elected officials: Do you not see the enormous lack of wisdom here?

–When homeless people are treated like trash on the street without value or worth, our consciences have been seared. Multi-millions cannot build on an eroded foundation. We must acknowledge God and turn to His wisdom.

–When we call all those who belong to a certain political party “racists,” we have clearly lost our way. Historically, conservatives rather than liberals fought against slavery. Did you catch that? It was the Republican Party that opposed slavery to the point of war. Simply read the biography of Ulysses S. Grant to see how many men died on American soil in the Civil War fighting to free slaves. It is estimated that in some areas one out of five families lost a husband, father, son or brother fighting in this catastrophic war. When the media lie and twist our nation's history to sway voters and cause chaos, their consciences have been seared.

The Solution: The Pulpit and the Pew

Sadly, it takes tragedies—like the ones we are seeing—to motivate most Christians. There is hope. Colonial America was at a low point when the Great Awakening cleansed the land, as was England when George Whitefield's fiery sermons "burned the chaff."

I believe that a great move of God must begin in the pulpits and prayer rooms. As a father of five, I understand the desire to move to protect our families, but God often calls us to fight instead of flee. As California goes, so goes the nation. It's not a matter of if, but when. There is a time and a place for action. In the same way that the Federalist Papers urged and influenced citizens to get involved and ratify the new United States Constitution, we must speak the truth in love. The silent pulpit is not God's pulpit, and the passive pew is powerless. The day of the silent pastor must end. Are we pleasing God or men? Are we cowards or watchmen?

The game has changed—California changed its rules pertaining to voter ballots before the 2018 election. It's called ballot harvesting. Now anyone can collect absentee or mail-in voter ballots and turn them in. This is how many of our politicians were elected in 2018 in California. Millions of dollars were given to people to canvas the streets and collect votes. Can you imagine the number of illegal votes? It staggers the mind. While Christians turned on Netflix, grabbed a beer and went to sleep, the opposition was working overtime. We need to refocus our efforts and match their workload. Granted, the answer is not in politics, but silence has been our downfall. The silent Christian spoke volumes and lost ground while they were sleeping.

Additionally, we need to stop being so negative and critical. Yes, we have huge issues at hand, but we are called to be joyful Christians and are to be thankful for everything that God has given us. Despite circumstances, most of us live like royalty compared to other areas throughout the world. How many reading this need to repent and be filled again with love and compassion?

We must once again call sacred assemblies (see Joel 1-2). Instead of banquets and fundraisers, while they have their purpose, we must return to prayer and seek God for revival and renewal. This is how we fight our battles. God's call is not to Hollywood, Sacramento or the media but to us. To paraphrase 2 Chronicles 7:14, "If My people turn back to Me, I will heal and restore their land." Our hope is not in 2020 but in a sovereign God who rewards those who seek and obey.

There are times to encourage, but there are also times to contend for what is right—that time is now. Let it not be said of us today: "And there arose another generation after them who did not know the Lord" (Judg. 2:10, ESV). {eoa}

For more on revival in America, check out this special $.99 offer on Charisma's new e-book, The Secret Keys to Starting Revival.