

Holy Spirit Outpouring at SEU Coming to an End: Watch the Final Livestream

Over the past nine days, a powerful spiritual awakening has been ongoing at Southeastern University. Day and night, the campus has been filled with prayer and worship, testimonies of healing, repentance, and a deep awareness of the presence of God.

Some people have compared it to the Asbury Awakening from 2023. Now, SEU has announced that this sacred season is drawing to a close on Friday, 2/20.

SEU reports this “will be our final day of gathering in this format. It will be a time to celebrate all that God has done, share testimonies, and cast vision for the future of SEU as this outpouring becomes a season of pouring out what God has done here into the world.”

This extraordinary move of the Holy Spirit first broke out at Florida's Southeastern University (SEU) over a week ago. Some people have compared it to the Asbury Awakening from 2023.

It began during a three-day conference that started last Monday and was scheduled to end Wednesday evening. When speaker Jennie Allen called students to repentance, Campus Pastor Jonathan Rivera told CBN's Billy Hallowell that things unexpectedly began to change.

“What she did was she asked students to confess sin publicly and as loud as possible. At first, we were kind of like, we don't know how this is going to look or where it's going to go, and students literally leaned in completely and started shouting as loud as they could, confessing sin, burdens, issues, all kinds of stuff. And after that happened, something shifted in the room, something undeniable happened that we all felt," Rivera said.
