

Hundreds Declare Jesus as Lord in 'Baptize California' at Pirate's Cove

Hundreds of believers took the plunge at Baptize California over the weekend, publicly declaring their faith in Jesus Christ.

On May 2nd, thousands showed up to celebrate and worship at Pirate's Cove in Corona Del Mar, CA, for the event featuring Live worship from Tiffany Hudson, Abbie Gamboa, Matt Crocker, and Oceans Music.

"Today we gathered for Baptize California and saw revival breaking out on the shores of Pirates Cove," the Baptize organization stated in a post. "The atmosphere was filled with faith, freedom, and the undeniable presence of God. What we witnessed was not just an event, but a glimpse of heaven meeting earth right here in California. And this is just the beginning! Revival is here."

Pirate's Cove is the site where the Jesus Revolution baptisms began back in the early 70s, and the Baptize California movement, as well as Pastor Greg Laurie's Harvest Christian Fellowship, have been holding mass baptisms there over the past few years as a new awakening is unfolding in America.

More than 30 churches took part in the latest Baptize California campaign on Saturday, with over 650 people registering in advance for baptism. Organizers expect the final total could exceed 1,000.

And this was just the kickoff to something even bigger. On Pentecost Sunday, May 24, the mission expands to Baptize America and Baptize the World with participating churches that have registered at .
