Cahn stressed the importance of being cautious with setting dates. "Be careful. Be very careful about date setting. We don't know the day or the hour. Be careful about thinking it's going to come this September because those things bring disrepute to the Lord," he warns. "Don't go beyond what God says. Don't get dogmatic about these things like it's the Bible. And you don't want to put your faith in a date and then if it doesn't happen, it's going to affect your faith or the faith of other people."

The speculation originates from people believing that Jesus revealed the date of the Rapture, and a celestial alignment tied to Revelation 12. This biblical passage describes "a woman clothed with the sun, the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of 12 stars," giving birth to the Messiah while a dragon, representing Satan, attempts to devour her child.

Proponents of the Sept. 23 Rapture theory focus on a supposed astronomical event: the constellation Virgo near Leo, with the sun, moon and Jupiter aligning to signify the birth of the Messiah. This alignment previously occurred in 2017. Because the Feast of Trumpets falls on the same date in 2025, some suggest it signals the Rapture.
