

Kim Clement's Prophetic Warning: 11 Terror Groups, America and a Coming Betrayal

Could a warning Kim Clement gave more than a decade ago be coming into focus right now?

During a recent Codebreakers broadcast, Donné Clement Petruska revisited a striking 2014 prophecy from her late father involving terrorism, the United States and a coalition connected to Russia, Syria, Iran and Turkey. As Petruska examined the prophecy alongside what she sees unfolding across the geopolitical landscape, one detail stood out: Clement said he saw 11 terror groups emerging.

"While I was praying, I saw 11 terror groups," Clement said in the Sept. 24, 2014, prophecy. "This is something you must please take note of."

Clement emphasized that he was not merely speaking about the many terrorist organizations already operating around the world.

"No, no, no. I saw 11 terror groups, terrorist groups emerging from this present group," Clement said, referring to the environment surrounding ISIS at the time.

For Petruska, those words carry new weight as she watches developments surrounding Turkey, Syria, Russia and Iran—the same nations Clement repeatedly identified.

In another prophecy highlighted during the broadcast, Clement declared, "Russia has joined its hands to Iran, Syria, and is gathering as many nations as possible to come and strike the Jews and to strike at this Christian nation."

Yet perhaps one of the most startling elements of Clement's prophecy was his warning that a terror organization was already present inside America.

"They don't have to get in through the borders. They are already here," Clement said. "I'm not talking about ISIS. I'm talking about another group of people that are putting on a front that looks good, but they ... are there to attack."

Clement said the organization began with the letter "R," but did not clearly identify the group. Petruska cautioned viewers against jumping to conclusions, instead encouraging Christians to pray and seek discernment about what the prophecy could mean.

However, Clement's warning also contained a remarkable message of hope.

He prophesied that betrayal would arise from within these organizations and expose information that would weaken them. More strikingly, he foresaw radical encounters with Jesus Christ among people inside them.

"These tribes will be dealt the same severe blow that was inflicted on Saul of Tarsus," Clement said, describing "a Damascus Road light."

"God is going to work from within," he continued.

Clement even predicted that young people connected to these groups would encounter Christ and emerge with prophetic callings.

Petruska believes Christians should be paying attention without falling into fear or sensationalism.

"We've known about the 11 terror organizations for a long time that he prophesied that,” she said. “But it wasn’t there for us to see yet. But I think that we are in that moment now.”

As the nations continue to shift, the question remains: Was Kim Clement seeing this moment more than a decade ago?
