

Most Christians Are Missing This Major End-Times Sign

Something extraordinary is happening in Israel, and many Christians aren't paying attention.

The prophetic clock is ticking, and at the center of it all is a biblical mystery—the red heifer. For thousands of years, this seemingly obscure ritual has held deep significance in Jewish law, yet its relevance to prophecy and the future of Israel have never been more critical than they are today.

Gary Stearman, host of Prophecy Watchers, recently sat down with co-host Mondo Gonzalez to discuss the red heifer's role in end-times prophecy. If you've never heard of the red heifer, you're not alone. As Stearman puts it, "Most Christians are not familiar with it at all." Yet, its importance is undeniable, particularly when it comes to the rebuilding of the Third Temple.

The Biblical Requirement

According to Numbers 19, God commanded the Israelites to bring forth a red heifer—a female cow without blemish, never yoked or used for labor—to be sacrificed. Its ashes would then be mixed with water and used for ritual purification, particularly to cleanse those who had come into contact with the dead.

Without this purification, Jewish law deems it impossible to approach God in the temple. As Gonzalez explains, "The one thing that is not complete yet is the red heifer ritual." In other words, without the ashes of the red heifer, the Third

Temple cannot be fully operational.
